feces available in public toilets. It is widely used in public places such as schools, public offices, and commercial buildings. The usage of this product has been increasing, especially in rural areas where access to proper sanitation facilities is limited. It is considered an effective solution for improving hygiene and sanitation standards in these areas. The use of this product can also help reduce the spread of diseases and improve the overall health of the population. In addition, it is eco-friendly and can be easily disposed of, making it a sustainable option for waste management. The usage of this product is encouraged for all individuals and families to promote a cleaner and healthier environment.